DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's arguments, see paper, filed 5/21/10, with respect to the rejection(s) of claim(s) under 35 USC 103(a) have been fully considered and are persuasive. Therefore, the rejection has been withdrawn. However, upon further consideration, a new ground(s) of rejection is made below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6,7 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Howard (USPN 6238673; 5/29/01). Howard teaches that grape extracts contain polyphenols including flavonoids (abstract, column 1 lines 12-20, column 2 lines 25-41). Howard does not teach that the polyphenols including the flavonoids increased as a result of treating the grapevine plant with the acylcyclohexanedione of formula I. However, Howard revealed that grape wine extracts inherently contain polyphenols including flavonoids. There are no data provided in the specification to show how much the polyphenols including flavonoids increased as a result of treating the plant with the acylcyclohexanedione of formula I. Note, claims are to compositions; therefore a statement to intended use recited therein has patentable significance as recited in claim 15.

Claims 6,7 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Howard (USPN 6099854; 8/8/00). Howard teaches that grape extracts contain polyphenols including flavonoids (abstract, column 1 lines 51-65, claims 1-3,10). Howard does not teach that the polyphenols including the flavonoids increased as a result of treating the grapevine plant with the acylcyclohexanedione of formula I. However, Howard revealed that grape wine extracts inherently contain polyphenols including flavonoids. There are no data provided in the specification to show how much the polyphenols including flavonoids increased as a result of treating the plant with the acylcyclohexanedione of formula I. Note, claims are to compositions; therefore a statement to intended use recited therein has patentable significance as recited in claim 15.

Allowable Subject Matter

At the preappeal conferences it was decided that previous rejections of record be withdrawn and that claims 1-4, 9-12 and 14 be indicated allowable. The prior art does not teach instant method of increasing flavonoids and other phenolic constituents wherein acylcyclohexanedione of formula I is applied to a grape or hop plant.
